

Written Component
Water: In Focus

This photo inspires me because when I look at it, I think of it being divided by how water is used. Where the water is too dark from the ice and such, which would be what we use from the entire world for our own greedy purposes. The rest, where there is beautiful reflection, is what we have left and that is being vanquished. I think we should keep the beautiful image.