Water: In Focus

This picture inspires me because it has so many virtues about the photo. It's a mysterious image, full of wonder and curiosity about what could possibly live in the ocean.

Tons of people could only imagine about how far the ocean really stretches, or how many underwater things that we don't know anything at all about. I think this picture expresses gentleness, the calm and soothing sound of the waves. It also expresses relaxation, and the fact that the big blue ocean is really the perfect place to be to put your feet up.

All these facts are great, but the most important for me is that the ocean is special. It's a place that connects family and friends to each other and the limits of knowledge about the ocean are endless.

The ocean is strong, powerful, and breathtaking. And for most people the most beautiful thing they have ever seen. I have had three wonderful experiences with the ocean and hopefully more. This picture inspires me because there's no other place like it.
